1. Jambi is a country that won its independence from colonial rule in 1985. Ever since this period, the country has never respected election outcomes. There are reports of corruption, looting, rule by law as well as disappearance of human rights defenders. As a human rights defender who has a registered human rights civil society organisation and has won a tender to produce a human rights defenders' protection and safety manual, show the key strategies and activities you would advice or include in your manual for human rights defender's safety and protection in Jambi.
2. There are a lot of complains about the International Criminal Court (ICC) by the African political elites. Hint on the complaints and suggest ways to address these complaints by the african political elites.
3. 'Human rights are a mere mirth which cannot be taken seriously'. Using any country of your choice as a case example, support or refute the validity of such a statement.
4. Evaluate the efficacy of 'naming and shaming' as a tool under the carrot and stick mechanisms in human rights protection and promotion.
5. Assess the criticism by Afrocentric scholars that human rights and democracy are tools used by the West as smokescreen for neo-colonial tendencies in African countries.
